Explore the galleries and discover exciting performances in our dramatic space on the night of each full moon.

Full: Daktari
THURSDAY / 3.1.18 / 7:00
Programmed by Karen Seneferu
Daktari Dance Medicine Collective explores the mediums of drum, movement, meditation, and ritual, illuminating the African spirit.

Full: Pairs
SATURDAY / 3.31.18 / 7:00
Programmed by Berkeley Symphony with Anna Clyne
A night of harmonious pairings. Berkeley Symphony musicians and friends play compositions by Berkeley Sounds composer fellows paired with pieces written by their mentors: Aiyana Braun with Jennifer Higdon; Ursula Kwong-Brown with Myra Melford; Peter Shin with Ted Hearne; and Anna Clyne with Julia Wolfe.

Full: Symphony and Ballet
SUNDAY / 4.29.18 / 7:00
Programmed by Berkeley Symphony with Anna Clyne
Berkeley Sounds composer fellows join forces with the choreographers and dancers of Berkeley Ballet Theater to explore what magical results occur when music meets dance. World premieres of small-ensemble pieces written by Aiyana Braun, Peter Shin, and Ursula Kwong-Brown are matched with work by choreographers Laura O’Malley, Keon Saghari, and Vanessa Thiessen.

Full: Cities
TUESDAY / 5.29.18 / 7:00
Programmed by Berkeley Symphony with Anna Clyne
Works by composers from three continents come together to soak in the full moon’s glow. Berkeley Symphony musicians and friends perform six small-ensemble pieces by living composers from three cities: two from San Francisco, two from Hamburg, and two from Shanghai.

Please note: Seating for Full is limited.
Full is made possible with the generous support of the BAMPFA Trustees.

ARTS + DESIGN MONDAYS @ BAMPFA
PUBLIC (RE)ASSEMBLY
Admission free, unless otherwise indicated
What is the role of public assembly in our current moment? Are new models necessary to respond artistically and technologically to our political climate? Exploring the many associations of the word assembly, this lecture series challenges us to think about the democratic right to assemble, recalls the artistic history of assemblage, and considers how UC Berkeley might reimagine the “school assembly” as a site of social transformation. Doors open at 6 p.m. See bampfa.org or artsdesign.berkeley.edu/mondays for details.

ARTS + DESIGN WEDNESDAYS @ BAMPFA
EXPERIMENT AND EXPLORATION
Admission free
This series explores the exciting world of the Bay Area’s alternative, underground, and experimental media arts communities and the ways they have transformed contemporary art and media culture. Led by UC Berkeley Associate Professor of Film and Media Jeffrey Skoller, the series engages prominent media artists, curators, and critics to explore the idea of experimentalism in art as a risk-taking approach to creative expression and as a philosophical position that emphasizes art as process and invention over product and professional mastery. See bampfa.org or artsdesign.berkeley.edu/wednesdays for details.

Artist’s Talk: Al Wong
FRIDAY / 4.6.18 / 12:00

Artist Al Wong discusses the exhibition Lost Sister (p. 10) in the context of his other photo installations from 2017.

Invitation to a Lost World: 5,000 Years of Art from the Bay Area Shell Mounds
SATURDAY / 4.7.18 / 2:00

See rare archaeological objects from the shell mounds of the East Bay shoreline—traces of the fishing villages established by an ancient people thousands of years ago—and hear from a panel of Native Californian artists and others, including Kent Lightfoot, Linda Yamane, Ron Goode, Vincent Medina, Fred Velasquez, and Frank LaPena.

This event in conjunction with Way Bay is organized by Malcolm Margolin and cosponsored by the California Institute for Community, Art, and Nature, Phoebe A. Hearst Museum of Anthropology, and Richmond History Museum.

Gallery Talk: Todd Olson on Agony in Effigy
FRIDAY / 4.13.18 / 12:00

Todd Olson, professor of early modern art in UC Berkeley’s Department of Art History, explores the theme of female violence in two representations of Judith with the head of Holofernes on view in Agony in Effigy: Art, Truth, Pain, and the Body.

Enrique Chagoya and Rupert García on Political Art
FRIDAY / 4.20.18 / 6:00

Two celebrated Bay Area artists, Rupert García and Enrique Chagoya, present a public conversation about their approaches to making politically driven artwork, their experiences of the Bay Area past and present, and ways we can think about art in relation to the current moment in political history.

Panel Discussion: Re-Seeing Dictee
SATURDAY / 4.21.18 / 1:00

This panel takes a fresh look at Theresa Hak Kyung Cha’s influential book Dictee, bringing different perspectives to bear on the relation of this key work to the rest of Cha’s multifaceted oeuvre. UC Berkeley Art Practice Chair Allan deSouza moderates a discussion with UC Berkeley Professor Trinh T. Minh-ha, College for Creative Studies Professor Michael Stone-Richards, and Reese Williams, the original publisher of Dictee.

Panel Discussion: Carlos Villa: Worlds in Collision
SATURDAY / 4.21.18 / 2:00

Bay Area artist Carlos Villa organized an iconic series of projects under the “Worlds in Collision” umbrella from 1976 until his passing in 2013, addressing multiculturalism, education, activism, and identity politics with the intention of shaping a more inclusive art world and art history. This program revisits Villa’s legacy and refreshes these important conversations.

Lil B: Extremely Rare Photography and Art Collection Issue #1
SATURDAY / 5.5.18 / 4:00

Berkeley recording artist Brandon “Lil B” McCartney presents photographic works and “extremely rare art,” sharing his unique focus on compassion, unrestrained creative expression, and the power of positive thinking.

MFA Artists’ Talk
FRIDAY / 5.11.18 / 6:00

Meet the graduates of UC Berkeley’s Master of Fine Arts program as they talk about their recent work (p. 11). This year’s graduates are Maggie Lawson, Nancy Sayavong, Nicki Green, Olivia Ting, Rachel Stallings, and Sarah-Dawn Albani. BAMPFA members are invited to a reception at 7 p.m.

Lecture: Alicia McCarthy and Ruby Neri
WEDNESDAY / 5.23.18 / 6:00

In this joint presentation, MATRIX artists Alicia McCarthy and Ruby Neri (p. 11) explore their twenty-year history of collaboration and artistic dialogue, as well as points of convergence between their individual practices.

GUIDED TOURS

Explore the works on view in Way Bay with tours led by UC Berkeley graduate students on selected Wednesdays, Sundays, and Free First Thursdays. See calendar (pp. 2–3) for schedule. Sign language interpreter Patricia Lessard offers an ASL-interpreted tour on Saturday, April 14, at 1:30 p.m.

FIVE TABLES

Drop by our art study centers on Free First Thursdays for an up-close look at treasures from the BAMPFA collections, laid out on the five tables in the seminar area. Find out about the works on view at bampfa.org.

Admission free for kids 18 & under and for one adult per child 13 & under

Gallery + Studio
For ages 6–12 with accompanying adult(s)
This two-part workshop integrates an interactive gallery tour with a related art project; each session lasts about an hour and a half. Sign up on site beginning fifteen minutes before the session you wish to attend. Space is limited to twelve kids per session; please arrive promptly to sign up.

SATURDAY / 3.10.18
11:30–1:00 or 1:00–2:30

Self-Portraits/Community Portraits
Create mixed-media portraits of yourself and people in your community inspired by Karabo Poppy Moletsane’s Art Wall project with artist Vreni Michelini Castillo. Using collage, drawing, and painting, explore the use of shapes, colors, and textures in portraiture, while experimenting with scale.

SATURDAY / 4.14.18
11:30–1:00 or 1:00–2:30

Through Line: Collaged Portraits/ Imagined Spaces
Inspired by Romare Bearden’s The City and its People and other figurative works in Way Bay, play with collage and create a portrait of people dear to you in an imagined space that you revere. Led by artist Jennifer Kindell.

SATURDAY / 5.12.18
11:30–1:00 or 1:00–2:30

Ink-Brush Landscapes
Learn the basics of painting a landscape—such as how to place objects in the background, middle ground, and foreground—as you experiment with creating light and dark and other visual effects using brush and ink. Artist Raphael Noz will guide your process as you paint your own landscape scroll, learning from artworks in Dreaming the Lost Ming.

Roundtable Reading
Recommended for ages 8 and up (younger kids welcome as listeners)
Young readers are invited to read aloud the opening chapters of a good book in BAMPFA’s Reading Room and are given a copy to continue reading at home. No advance sign-up needed; just show up at 3 o’clock, ready to read!

SATURDAY / 3.10.18 / 3:00

The Wild Robot by Peter Brown
Reading led by Adoria Williams, librarian, Jefferson Elementary School, Berkeley
When robot Roz opens her eyes for the first time, she finds herself alone on a remote island. After battling a fierce storm and escaping a vicious bear attack, she realizes that her only hope for survival is to adapt to her surroundings and learn from the island’s animal inhabitants. The island slowly starts to feel like home until, one day, the robot’s mysterious past comes back to haunt her.

SATURDAY / 4.14.18 / 3:00

Wishtree by Katherine Applegate
Reading led by Becca Todd, district library coordinator, Berkeley Unified School District
Red, a tall, large-hearted oak, is a “wishtree”—people write down their wishes and tie them to her branches. Red throws her shade over the home of Samar, a gentle ten-year-old girl. When a boy attacks Red’s bark and writes an ugly message aimed at Samar’s family, Red realizes that her experience as a wishtree is more important than ever, and decides to do what she can.

SATURDAY / 5.12.18 / 3:00

A Mystery Bigger than Big / Un misterio más grande que grandísimo by René Saldaña
Reading led by Vreni Michelini Castillo, artist and educator
Mickey Rangel is the real deal—a smart, wisecracking fifth-grade detective with an online certificate to prove it, not to mention his solid record of solved cases. Now, everyone’s talking about Natalia, the quiet new girl who doesn’t interact with anyone. What’s her story? Mickey is determined to crack the case! This is our first bilingual Roundtable Reading, offered in partnership with the Berkeley Public Schools’ Two-Way Immersion language program.

Free tickets for the film screening will be available at the will-call table beginning at 2:00.
Al Wong: Lost Sister is a meditation on a family member the artist never met. Though Wong’s father immigrated to the United States in 1917 and the artist himself was born and raised in San Francisco, his family was able to maintain contact with relatives still living in China until the Chinese Civil War and Communist Revolution, when communication became difficult. In this series of sixty-four unique but related variations of a portrait of a young woman, the artist attempts to imagine and capture the psychological pressures felt by the subject, who was trapped in China and unable to join her family in the United States. Fifty-seven of the images incorporate the same photographic portrait—torn, cut, or shredded, the pieces reassembled into a face that is barely recognizable, and at times even psychedelic or alien. In other instances, the visage is stapled, excised, burned, or incised with pins. Consecutive manipulations of the image evoke not only the Chinese immigrant experience, but also the universal feelings of displacement and detachment that permeate immigrant communities.

Wong taught at the San Francisco Art Institute for more than forty years and has had numerous exhibitions in San Francisco and across the country. A pioneering experimental filmmaker and artist, he often combines film, light projections, and shadows in his installation pieces. Wong’s filmmaking sensibility is evident in Lost Sister, which is displayed, as intended by the artist, in a sequential line to mimic the frames of a moving picture. Lost Sister, presented here in its entirety for the first time, is a formal exercise in collage that quietly captures the feelings of alienation, estrangement, and confinement experienced by both Chinese immigrants and family members left behind, as personal histories collided with geopolitical conflicts and revolution.

Al Wong: Lost Sister is organized by Curatorial Assistant Matthew Coleman and Andrew W. Mellon Postdoctoral Curatorial Fellow Yi Yi Mon (Rosaline) Kyo.

MATRIX 270

MAY 23–AUGUST 26
NEW EXHIBITION

This exhibition convenes two artists who have collaborated and maintained a strong artistic dialogue over the last several decades, ever since they were students at the San Francisco Art Institute (SFAI). Often associated with the San Francisco Mission School, a term coined to describe a group of artists living and working in the city’s Mission neighborhood in the 1990s and early 2000s, McCarthy and Neri work in different media but share a range of aesthetic affinities and artistic approaches. For this exhibition, and the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of MATRIX, the two artists have also produced a collaborative poster that will be available in the BAMPFA Store.

Alicia McCarthy and Ruby Neri / MATRIX 270 is organized by Apsara DiQuinzio, curator of modern and contemporary art and Phyllis C. Wattis MATRIX Curator, with Valerie Moon, curatorial assistant. The MATRIX Program is made possible with a generous endowment gift from Phyllis C. Wattis and the continued support of the BAMPFA Trustees.

MAY 11–JUNE 17
NEW EXHIBITION

Each year, BAMPFA and the University of California, Berkeley Department of Art Practice collaborate to present an exhibition of works by Berkeley Master of Fine Arts graduates. This year’s exhibition includes the exceptional work of Maggie Lawson, Nancy Sayavong, Nicki Green, Olivia Ting, Rachel Stallings, and Sarah-Dawn Albani.

The 48th Annual University of California, Berkeley Master of Fine Arts Graduate Exhibition is organized by Curatorial Assistant Valene Moon. The annual MFA exhibition is made possible by the Barbaras Berelson Wiltsek Endowment.
Through works from South, Southeast, and East Asia as well as the Himalayas dating from the second through the twentieth centuries, this exhibition examines how Buddhist power was visually expressed and transmitted throughout Asia. The exhibition follows two traces: the perpetuation of Buddhist teachings through the creation of pantheons and lineages, and the exchange and appropriation of sacred Buddhist forms. Selected artworks from BAMPFA’s collection reveal how visual practices were borrowed and traversed cultural, linguistic, and geographic boundaries.

While some works depict the basic tenets of Buddhism, such as cycles of rebirths and Buddhist cosmological space, others illustrate spiritual relationships in the Buddhist pantheon to lend power to both major and minor sacred figures. Sacred relics embedded in sculptural figures or traced footprints on the painted surface imbue the works with ritual power and spiritual presence. Portraits of religious leaders from particular lineages assert the concept of emanation, reincarnation, and teachings. And stories of the Buddha and other powerful figures provide visual lessons for everyday worshippers, while more esoteric images guide advanced practitioners through sacred meditational paths.

Master Traces, Transcultural Visions is organized by Yi Yi Mon (Rosaline) Kyo, Andrew W. Mellon Postdoctoral Curatorial Fellow.

Figure of Vajravidhana, Eastern Tibet or Southwest China, 11th–12th century; yellow silt stone; on long-term loan to BAMPFA from a private collection.

Exceptional examples of Buddhist painting are featured in this presentation of art from Tibet, Nepal, India, China, and Mongolia.

Tsongkhapa, Tibet, 18th century (detail); mineral and vegetable pigments on cotton, 33 × 50 in.; BAMPFA, bequest of G. Eleanore Murray.
Way Bay is made possible with lead support from Nion McEvoy and Leslie Berriman. Additional support is provided by Alexandra Bowes and Stephen Williamson, Rena Bransten, Gertrud V. Parker, Janie and Jeff Green, and others.

Theresa Hak Kyung Cha: Avant Dictee is made possible with support from the Theresa Hak Kyung Cha Archive Fund and Young Chul and Elizabeth Cha Park.

Cal Conversations: Dreaming the Lost Ming is organized by the students in UC Berkeley Professor Sophie Volpp’s seminar Seventeenth-Century Nanjing: Painting, Theater, Memoir in conjunction with Senior Curator for Asian Art Julia White and postdoctoral fellow Yi Yi Mon (Rosaline) Kyo.

The MATRIX Program is made possible with a generous endowment gift from Phyllis C. Wattis and the continued support of the BAMPFA Trustees.

The Art Wall is commissioned by BAMPFA and made possible with major funding from Frances Hellman and Warren Breslau. Additional support is provided by Hotel Shattuck Plaza.

SELF-PORTRAITS OF AMERICA AT WAR

At the time the most documented conflict in history, the Vietnam War generated a torrent of brutal images, stories, and statistics disseminated daily in mass media, bringing Americans face to face with the carnage committed in the name of freedom and prosperity. Meanwhile, journalists, filmmakers, and artists sought ways to chronicle, represent, and reflect on the war, searching for truth amid a conflict replete with fictions and lies. Fifty years after the massacre of hundreds of Vietnamese civilians by American soldiers at My Lai—an atrocity whose extent was exposed only gradually, as veterans returned with stories of war crimes—we present this series of innovative documentaries that reveal the impact of the conflict on the way Americans perceived themselves. Eschewing the drama, pathos, and pyrotechnics of conventional war movies, these films employ a straightforward, economical approach that nonetheless has a powerful and enduring impact. Many of the works, such as In the Year of the Pig, Hearts and Minds, Time of the Locust, and Viet-Flakes, recontextualize news footage and photographs to lend the documents deeper poetic and political resonance. Other films made as the war raged on, including No Vietnamese Ever Called Me Nigger, The Black Gl, and Winter Soldier, share a chorus of voices searching for justification of the human cost of national ambitions, while two films made decades later—Little Dieter Needs to Fly and The Fog of War—feature subjects forever haunted by their participation.

This series is presented in association with Cal Performances, which presents Kronos Quartet’s performance of My Lai on March 4 at Zellerbach Hall.

INTERVIEWS WITH MY LAI VETERANS
JOSEPH STRICK (US, 1970) RESTORED 35MM PRINT
INTRODUCTION Harriet Scott Chessman

Harriet Scott Chessman has published five novels and created the libretto for the operatic piece My Lai. On March 16, 1968, in the course of the “search and destroy” mission in My Lai, hundreds of unarmed Vietnamese men, women, and children were slaughtered by American soldiers; many were also raped and mutilated. Initially the military lied about the number of victims, but photographs and eyewitness accounts finally made their way into the press more than a year later. In an effort to “understand this insanity,” filmmaker Joseph Strick and his crew searched throughout the United States to find the five veterans willing to disobey the army’s orders not to talk about the massacre.

Photographed by Haskell Wexler, Richard Pearce. With Richard Hammer, Gary Garfolo, Garry Crossley, Vernardo Simpson. (22 mins, Color, 35mm, From Academy Film Archive, permission Betsy Strick)

WITH BASIC TRAINING
FREDERICK WISEMAN (US, 1971)

Basic Training follows a company of enlisted men through nine weeks of physical and ideological training at Fort Knox in the summer of 1970. While the instructors assert that the US Army is undefeatable, some recruits struggle with the exercises, and others question the validity of the war; one African American soldier argues that he has no country for which to fight. “The implication is clear: in a short space of time, ordinary men can be trained to kill with maximum efficiency” (Marty Bamber).

PANEL DISCUSSION: KRONOS QUARTET, MY LAI
Free Admission!

Tickets available at Will Call beginning at 3 p.m. Gallery admission not included.

Kronos Quartet’s collaboration with composer Jonathan Berger and novelist Harriet Scott Chessman, My Lai revisits the horrors of the massacre and its aftermath from the perspective of the heroic helicopter pilot, Hugh Thompson Jr., who tried to intervene. Join Berger, Chessman, Kronos Quartet’s David Harrington, vocalist Rinde Eckert, instrumentalist Ván-Anh Vă, and Drew Cameron of the Combat Paper Project for a conversation in the Barbro Osher Theater. My Lai will be presented by Cal Performances on Sunday, March 4, at UC Berkeley’s Zellerbach Hall; information: calperformances.org.

WINTER SOLDIER
WINTERFILM COLLECTIVE (US, 1972)
INTRODUCTION David Harrington
IN PERSON Peter Gessner

Violinist David Harrington is the founder and artistic director of the Grammy-winning Kronos Quartet.

After news of the My Lai massacre was finally made public, Vietnam Veterans Against the War organized the Winter Soldier investigation, a public inquiry into war crimes committed by US forces in Vietnam. In February 1971 dozens of veterans gathered in Detroit to report crimes they had witnessed or committed. The event received scant media attention at the time, but thanks to a collective of filmmakers and veterans, the proceedings were recorded and edited into one of the most powerful indictments of US participation in the war—“an unflinchingly clear-eyed extended gaze at military-brand, all-American inhumanity” (Johnny Ray Huston, Bay Guardian).

The Fog of War: Eleven Lessons from the Life of Robert S. McNamara

Errol Morris

Built around interviews with former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, the Academy Award–winning The Fog of War is a haunted retrospective reflection on the application of US military power from World War II through the war in Vietnam. McNamara reminisces about his childhood, education (at UC Berkeley), and family life in addition to his professional career. As compelling as it is chilling, the film skillfully illustrates McNamara’s “lessons” on various themes—empathizing with your enemy, the limits of reason, proportionality in war, the need to do evil to do good—with archival footage, declassified White House recordings, animation, and an immersive soundtrack by Philip Glass.

Photographed by Robert Chappel, Peter Donahue. (87 mins, Color, 35mm, From Sony Pictures Classics)

THE SILENCE OF GOD

Throughout 2018, BAMPFA celebrates the artistic legacy of Ingmar Bergman (1918–2007) on the centenary of his birth, presenting multiple series that illuminate different dimensions of the director’s career. This spring, for our second thematic installment, we focus on Bergman’s metaphysical investigations, with his so-called “God Trilogy”—Through a Glass Darkly, Winter Light, and The Silence—as centerpiece.

Showcasing many high-quality prints as well as recent digital restorations, this yearlong retrospective is an opportunity to rediscover—or discover for the first time—the many facets of this marvelous director. Running concurrently with the series in the Barbro Osher Theater, presentations in Theater 2 offer a more intimate, salon-style experience of early, rarely screened Bergman works (see p. 18).

Bergman 100 is organized by Senior Film Curator Susan Oxtoby and presented with support from The Barbro Osher Pro Suecia Foundation. Bart Testa’s presentation is part of In Focus, presented with support from the National Endowment for the Arts and The Barbro Osher Pro Suecia Foundation. Her father (Gunnar Björnstrand) and husband (Max von Sydow), both cold, self-absorbed intellectuals, distance themselves . . . while Karín increasingly fixates on her vulnerable and sexually susceptible younger brother. (Det sjunde inseglet). It may be folly to think that life and thus death could hold any secrets. With The Seventh Seal Bergman spoke to this modern query in a medieval setting rendered at once awesome and intimate in chiaroscuro. A knight, Antonius Block (Max von Sydow), and his squire Jöns return disillusioned from the Crusades to the hysteria of plague-infested fourteenth-century Sweden. On the shore Block encounters Death and challenges him to a game of chess, playing for time to perform one significant act in life. What is timeless about this existential passion play is the humanity of its characters, who seem to shun allegory like a kind of narrative death. JUDY BLOCH

Bart Testa is a senior lecturer at Innis College and the Cinema Studies Institute at the University of Toronto. Preceding the film, he will deliver a keynote lecture (c. 50 mins) on the silence of God in Bergman’s cinema.

(Nattvardsägarna). Winter Light is the central film in Bergman’s so-called “God trilogy.” Gunnar Björnstrand plays the doubting Tomas, pastor of a dwindling rural parish. Tomas is an isolated individual, haunted by “God’s silence” and indifferent to the physical, whether in the person of the schoolmarmess Märta (Ingrid Thulin) or Christ himself. When a local fisherman (Max von Sydow) comes to him stupefied by fear of the atom bomb, Tomas cannot meet his gaze. The film’s spare style, which prefigures the modernist Persona, is one of gazes and avoidances, and the visual articulation of contradiction: bathed in bright winter light, Tomas becomes free from God. JUDY BLOCH

INTRODUCTION Bart Testa

(Tystnaden). Sisters Anna (Gunnel Lindblom) and Ester (Ingrid Thulin) are traveling with Anna’s son when they are forced by Ester’s poor health to hole up in a hotel in a strange country seemingly on the verge of war. Anna shuns the attentions of her desperately ill sister, while Ester is left to cope with the pain of her desire and her illness; it seems they are one. The third film of Bergman’s “God trilogy” was one of his most controversial. If it remains risky and experimental, it is not for its intimations of incest but for the postapocalyptic landscape of emotions it traverses. JUDY BLOCH

FANNY AND ALEXANDER 7:00
INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1982) 35MM PRINT
(Fanny och Alexander). Bergman’s dreamlike family chronicle is set in turn-of-the-century Sweden, where the members of an upper-middle-class theatrical clan are sheltered by their own theatrics from the deepening chaos of the outside world. Bergman has the grace in this most graceful film not to view their histriornics and eccentricities as neuroses. One tumultuous year in the life of the Ekdahl family is viewed through the eyes of ten-year-old Alexander, whose imagination fuels the magical goings-on leading up to the death of his father and his mother’s remarriage to a stern prelate. Fanny and Alexander may be Bergman’s fondest farewell to cinema, in what was announced at the time as his last film. JUDY BLOCH

This is the theatrical version of Fanny and Alexander; later this year, BAMPFA will present the television version, which runs 312 minutes.

(Ansiktet, a.k.a. The Face). A carriage bumps along a wooded path. Inside is a magician (Max von Sydow) and his entourage, including his young assistant and wife (Ingrid Thulin) and an ancient auntie. They are a down-at-the-heels lot, curious about the devil out in the woods and about death, which joins them in their carriage. There are hints of Persona, Fanny and Alexander, and Scenes from a Marriage here, but with its fairytale landscape, Expressionist sets, and old-dark-lab sci-fi, The Magician asks to be taken on its own terms. Max the mesmerist and Bergman the magician, each with his “apparatus,” effect the willing suspension of belief. JUDY BLOCH

SAWDMUT DAND TINSEL 7:00
INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1953)
(Gycklarnas altan, a.k.a. The Naked Night). Bergman’s earliest evocation of the theater of humiliation, Sawdust and Tinsel is a portrait of turn-of-the-century itinerant circus performers who are figures of ritual mortification before their public and, in a day and night of unmasking, before each other as well. The circus owner, Albert (Åke Grönberg), and his bareback-rider girlfriend, Anne (Harriet Andersson), seek the rejections of, respectively, an ex-wife and a scornful actor from the more “respectable” provincial theater. Their disgrace and redemption are mirrored in a dreamlike flashback, which in turn finds its resolution in a dream of return and reunion. Bergman’s players truly earn their bows. JUDY BLOCH

THE VIRGIN SPRING 7:00
INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1960)
(Jungfrukälan). Bergman went to a medieval wellspring, a folk song whose simplicity and stark violence he recreated in purely visual terms, for his first collaboration with cinematographer Sven Nykvist. A girl in the bloom of innocent sensuality is raped and murdered. A young boy who has watched his brothers perform the act suffers along with them the terrible revenge of her father (Max von Sydow). Bergman’s medieval forays derive their strange beauty from the fact that early Christianity seems foreign and mythic to contemporary viewers. The naked night, Christian death, and the agnosticism it provokes in the viewer. JUDY BLOCH

IT RAINS ON OUR LOVE

INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1946)

FRIDAY / 3.16.18 / 7:30
SUNDAY / 3.18.18 / 3:00
(Stagnar på vår kärl). Two young people try to protect a fragile love on the margins of society. Although It Rains on Our Love is perhaps the most schematic of Bergman’s early films about adolescents in crisis, with the guardians and adversaries of young love appearing in near-allegorical form, it is also the least theatrical. The scenes of idyll and refuge for persecuted young lovers, more fleeting and vulnerable in his other films, here have a warmth that Swedish critics greeted with positive relief after the “distorted sexuality” of Crisis.
An overall tone of naïveté peppered with burlesque irony makes this one of the most optimistic of Bergman’s early films. MARK SANDBERG

(Decent People) by Oskar Brasten. Photographed by Hilård Bladh, Göran

CRISIS

INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1946)

FRIDAY / 4.6.18 / 7:30
SUNDAY / 4.8.18 / 3:00
(Kris). The seductions and disillusionments of city life play counterpoint to provincial goodness in this morality tale of a young daughter pulled between the worlds of her two mothers. Bergman later disclaimed responsibility for the story by saying, “If someone had asked me to film the telephone catalogue I would have done so.” One can imagine that Bergman’s version of the phone book at this point might have been the same fascinating jumble of cinematic styles that one can find in Crisis, where the French cinema of the thirties meets expressionistic lighting and an early attempt at a Bergmanian dream sequence. MARK SANDBERG

Heart) by Leck Fischer. Photographed by Gösta Roosling. With Inga

A SHIP BOUND FOR INDIA

INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1947)

FRIDAY / 4.13.18 / 7:30
SUNDAY / 4.15.18 / 3:00
(Skepp till Indialand). A salvage boat provides the claustrophobic but fascinating space for this narrative of filmic revolt against a corrupt and overbearing father. Actor Birger Malmsten, to whom Bergman usually turned when he needed the depiction of a tortured adolescent, plays the hump-backed Johannes, cowed by his father’s brutality as captain of the ship.
The atmosphere Bergman creates on the waterfront, intentionally reminiscent of Marcel Carné’s French films, led André Bazin to enthuse about this film’s “world of blinding cinematic purity.” MARK SANDBERG

MUSIC IN THE DARK

INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1948)

FRIDAY / 4.20.18 / 7:30
SUNDAY / 4.22.18 / 3:00
(Musik i mörker, a.k.a. Night Is My Future). The conventional storyline of Music in the Dark relates the developing relationship between Bengt, a young musician blinded in an accident during his military service, and Ingrid, a lower-class servant girl in the home of Bengt’s parents. In A Ship Bound for India, blindness is a minor motif; here it is developed into a full-blown psychological study and metaphor for youthful angst. Bergman’s restless early experimentation with different styles here includes the classic Hitchcock conceit of filming himself in cameo; look for a young Bergman as a passenger on the train at the end of the film. MARK SANDBERG

Written by Dagmar Edqvist, based on her novel. Photographed by Göran Strindberg. With May Zetterling, Birger Malmsten, Bengt

THIRST

INGMAR BERGMAN (SWEDEN, 1949)

FRIDAY / 5.4.18 / 7:30
SUNDAY / 5.6.18 / 4:30
(Törst, a.k.a. Three Strange Loves). A voyage across a war-scarred Europe forms the background of a married couple’s collapsing relationship in Bergman’s dreamlike early work, a fascinatingly untethered first run at the themes of isolation, emotional torment, and romantic masochism that would make up much of his later career. “A sort of Voyage in Italy revised by Sartre” (Cinema 58). Thirst focuses on a couple on a train while leaping forward and back to other relationships—a widow and her lecherous psychiatrist, a lonely dancer—all connected by a similar hopelessness.
Technically remarkable, the film showcases Bergman’s growing assurance at cinematic storytelling.

Tengroth. Photographed by Gunnar Fischer. With Eva Henning, Birger Malmsten, Birgit Tengroth, Hasse Ekman. (84 mins, In (Zemlya). Earth is the masterpiece of the great Ukrainian director Dovzhenko; it is also his most experimental film. There seems to be a mad logic to its imagery, yet each startling image is precisely linked to the others, much as the peasants are linked through their shared passions, miseries, and mysteries. This is how Dovzhenko tells a story—of Ukrainian villagers coming to terms with collective farming against the brutal resistance of the kulaks and the more subtle resistance of tradition. The familiar catalog of earthly symbols here reaches an apotheosis, a daring poetry in the treatment of people and animals alike. JUDY BLOC

(Tretya meshchanskaya). One of the most delightful and outrageous early Soviet films, Bed and Sofa offers a surprisingly frank look at shifting values in a society still very much in transition. When Volodya moves to Moscow to look for work, he’s unable to find housing. So, he moves in with his old army buddy Kolya and Kolya’s wife, Lyuda. But while Kolya is away on business, a romance emerges between Lyuda and Volodya. Remarkably daring, Bed and Sofa is beautifully realized, with wonderful performances by its ménage-à-trois that draw you into the complexity of the emotional situation. RICHARD PEÑA

(Generalnaya liniya, a.k.a. Staroye i novoye, The Old and the New). Eisenstein’s first contemporary, rural subject, The General Line tells of a peasant woman’s struggle against superstition, hostility, and greed in her attempt to form a collective and bring to it a bull, a cream separator, and a tractor. This is Eisenstein’s “Russian Gothic,” populated with wonderful types and filled with humor and earthy imagery. It boasts a cream-separator spectacle to rival Busby Berkeley, wheat fields worthy of Tolstoy, and marvelous antibureaucratic satire on the level of the Russian Eccentrics. Like Alexander Nevsky (p. 19), Ivan the Terrible is a collaboration with “that magician Sergei Prokofiev,” as Eisenstein called him; it has a strange magic bordering on sorcery. Filmed under difficult wartime conditions, it is set in sixteenth-century Moscow, where the newly crowned Czar Ivan attempts to thwart both the boyars (the feudal nobility) and the hold of the church to create a unified Russia. (Oktyabr, a.k.a. Ten Days That Shook the World). Made to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the October Revolution, October has taken on newsreel status: its famously spectacular scenes of the storming of the Winter Palace are said to be more spectacular and better attended than the actual event. But to see the film now is to re-experience the shock with which its experimentation was met on its initial release. (That release was held up while Eisenstein was forced to excise footage of Trotsky, who was himself being excised from Party life.) Eisenstein’s theories of intellectual montage turned the objects and figures of recent history into metaphorical elements.

The recent restoration of Rainer Werner Fassbinder’s long-unseen television miniseries Eight Hours Don’t Make a Day is a gift for cinephiles and for anyone who appreciates a beautifully articulated family drama. Meet the Krugers, headed by a spirited sixty-year-old widow (Luise Ullrich), who is best understood by her twenty-something grandson (Gottfried John) and his new girlfriend Marion (Hanna Schygulla). Through the story of this working-class family, Fassbinder addresses many sociopolitical issues facing postwar West Germany, including the high cost of housing, labor conditions, and prejudice against minorities. However, it is the narrative’s elliptical style, nuanced use of foreshadowing, elements of surprise, and first-rate performances by the marvelous troupe of actors (Kurt Raab, Irm Hermann, Margit Carstensen, Hans Hirschmüller, Karl Scheydt, Rudolf-Waldemar Brem, and others) that distinguish this compelling work. Fassbinder’s deep appreciation of the melodramas of Douglas Sirk (like All That Heaven Allows, screening March 25 and 30; see box at right) informs the style and emotional character of Eight Hours Don’t Make a Day.

Filmed on location at a factory in Cologne, Eight Hours was originally planned as an eight-part series; however, because of criticism from German trade unions, who felt misrepresented by Fassbinder’s depiction, the final three episodes were never filmed. The five-episode miniseries aired on West German television to an audience of six million viewers and represented a major achievement for Fassbinder. This restoration by the Fassbinder Foundation and the Museum of Modern Art fills in a pivotal period of Fassbinder’s remarkable career, which spanned film, television, and theater. BAMPFA presents each episode twice, including a marathon screening aptly scheduled on Mother’s Day.

Douglas Sirk’s elegiac mood piece is also a furious battle of ideas that, à la Thoreau, locates the American sadness in a violent split from Nature. A switched-off television screen is the mirror for a vast yet terribly personal emptiness in this mid-fifties melodrama. Jane Wyman is a widow “too beautiful to be lonely,” but toosmart not to be, in her small-town nouveau-riche milieu. Rock Hudson comes to prune her garden and uproots her life. Rock wants to be her redeemer, but family and friends try to seduce the lady back; and always, Jane’s big picture window looks out on, as it separates her from, the garden. Judy Bloch

UPRIZE!
SIFISO KHANYILE (SOUTH AFRICA, 2017)

Sifiso Khanyile’s Uprize! revisits South Africa’s Soweto Uprising, which began as a student rebellion against racist language rules in schools and became a founding moment in the history of anti-apartheid struggle. Khanyile has remarked, “I didn’t want to show black people running away from the police, fallen bodies on the ground. I wanted to show people fighting back, running towards the camera and the police.” For critic Hakeem Adam, he succeeds, revealing the “ingenuity, creativity and unapologetic resistance” of the African youth movement.

THE AFRICAN WHO WANTED TO FLY
SAMANTHA BIFFOT (GABON/FRANCE/BELGIUM, 2016)

How did a man born and raised in a small Gabonese town become the star of dozens of kung fu films and a member of Jackie Chan’s crew? The “first black man in Shaolin Temple” in China, Luc Bendza has a story as remarkable as any Hong Kong martial arts stunt. Samantha Biffot’s sweet-natured documentary unveils his remarkable trajectory from a thirteen-year-old who thought “Chinese could fly” to a contented, Mandarin-fluent kung fu hero.

MAPANTSULA
OLIVER SCHMITZ, THOMAS MOGOTLANE (SOUTH AFRICA, 1988)

INTRODUCTION Cornelius Moore

Cornelius Moore is codirector of the Bay Area distributor/producer California Newsreel.

MAPANTSULA (slang for gangster) was shot directly in the townships and bristles with an energy and ferocity fueled by South African underground culture, not to mention the then-contemporary, politicized direct cinema of Alan Clarke. Thirty years on, it’s a vital time capsule of protest, street culture, and pride.

Written by Mogotlane, Schmitz. Photographed by Rod Stewart. With Mogotlane, Thembi Mthali, Dolly Rathebe, Peter Sephuma. (106 mins, In English, Zulu, Sotho, and Afrikaans with English subtitles, Color, Beta SP, From California Newsreel)

PLAY THE DEVIL
MARIA GOVAN (TRINIDAD & TOBAGO/BAHAMAS/US, 2016)

Bahamian director Maria Govan, one of the Caribbean’s rising filmmakers, returns with this atmospheric noir drama on class divides, sexual repression, and identity in Trinidad. Young, gifted, and poor, Gregory stars in a theater production; his talents (or physique) catch the eye of the wealthy, smooth-talking businessman James, and soon the two are developing a friendship that could possibly blossom into something else.

Filmed in the picturesque Paramin highlands and set around the country’s legendary Carnival celebrations, Play the Devil reveals a part of the Caribbean rarely shown onscreen, with rituals all its own—and passions that are universal.

GREEN WHITE GREEN
ABBA MAKAMA (NIGERIA, 2016)

Three friends join together to get through the dog days of a Lagos summer—and create a film—in Abba Makama’s salute to the creativity and vitality of Nigerian youth, which earned a premiere (and comparisons to early Spike Lee joints) at the 2016 Toronto International Film Festival. An off-the-cuff, “meta-Nollywood” portrait of the city’s thriving bohemian culture that is also fascinating for its visuals of the city’s landscapes and surroundings, Green White Green (named after the colors of the Nigerian flag) answers how “the persistence of Nigeria defies the gods,” as one character remarks. “It’s a beautiful mosaic of madness,” notes Makama. “Like Nigeria.”

AFRICA AND THE DIASPORA: SHORT FILMS

The idiosyncratic work of Nigerien filmmaker Moustapha Alassane (1942–2015) ranges from animations and documentaries to ethnography-infused comedies and adaptations of African legends. His films share a playful, perceptional humor, as well as uniquely incisive commentary on modern Africa. Satires such as The Return of an Adventurer, in which young men play cowboys on the savanna, ridicule the westernized consumerism of the postcolonial generation, while the animated Bon voyage, Sim depicts a “toad republic” ruled by a venal president who gets overthrown. Alassane evokes the rich heritage of West African storytelling with Samba the Great, in which stop-motion puppets illustrate a griot’s narrative. TAL GERECHTER

VAYA
AKIN OMOTOSO (SOUTH AFRICA, 2016)

Three strangers from the South African hinterlands journey to bustling Johannesburg looking for success but find far more than they bargained for in this well-crafted urban noir from one of Africa’s brightest new commercial talents. Based on several true stories developed in a writing workshop for street youths, Vaya spins these strangers’ tales together into an interlocked tapestry of modern Johannesburg life in all its warmth, darkness, grit, and even humor. Compared to Alejandro González Iñárritu’s Amores perros during its premiere at the Toronto International Film Festival, the film marks prolific Nigerian-born actor-turned-director Akin Omotoso as one to watch.

AFRICA AND THE DIASPORA: SHORT FILMS

IN PERSON Carlos Javier Ortiz

Tonight’s program mingles short African fiction films with documentary essays from the diaspora. Rich with the sights of Dakar, Marabout trails a police detective investigating street children, while in Senegal’s north two young cinephiles try to get into their local cinema in Samedi Cinema. In Twaaga, two brothers find that comic-book fantasies have real-life equivalents in revolution-torn 1987 Burkina Faso. Using one family’s poetic recollections, noted photojournalist Carlos Javier Ortiz crafts a moving testament to the travels and travails of the Great Migration in A Thousand Midnights, while his We All We Got shows that black history—and the fight for change—is never in the past; it is now. Jojolo, an archival rediscovery from 1966, lyrically portrays a Haitian woman’s shift from Paris’s Right Bank to its Left.

UNDER THE SUN
VITALY MANSKY (RUSSIA/LATVIA/GERMANY/CZECH REPUBLIC/NORTH KOREA, 2015)

Shot with the permission and supervision of North Korean authorities, Russian director Vitaly Mansky’s film turns a propaganda effort into a deep-cover documentary about life inside one of the world’s most repressive nations. Its subjects—a young girl in Pyongyang and her family—rigorously stick to the ideological script, but by keeping the camera rolling between takes of their carefully staged “real life,” Mansky reveals the grinding gears of the totalitarian message machine.

IN THE INTENSE NOW
JOÃO MOREIRA SALLES (BRAZIL, 2017)

REPEATS FRIDAY / 5.4.18 (see Limited Engagements, p. 31)

(No intenso agora). The most recent film by João Moreira Salles (our guest last April during our tribute to Eduardo Coutinho) portrays the pivotal, tumultuous 1960s by examining the strikes of May 1968 in Paris and the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia three months later, as well as a trip the filmmaker’s mother took in 1966 from Brazil, recently overtaken by a military regime, to China at start of the Cultural Revolution. Described by Variety’s Owen Gleiberman as “reminiscent of the films of Chris Marker, in that it’s a documentary that’s really a meditation—history made poetic,” the film is composed entirely of home movies and archival footage.

YANCE FORD (US/DENMARK, 2017)

LES BLANK LECTURE Yance Ford

Free Screening! For BAMPFPA members and UC Berkeley students only. Current membership card admits two. Seating is limited. RSVP to bampfamember@berkeley.edu by April 9.

Yance Ford’s older brother was murdered on Long Island in 1992, at age twenty-four. Although it was known who killed him, no one was convicted. Darryl Pinckney notes in the New Yorker, “In Yance Ford’s powerful, disturbing, and very personal documentary, details are important. . . . Strong Island is the story of a black family that could not sustain the blow of racial injustice and fell apart.” Ford follows all the threads—not only those related to the murder and the resulting investigation, but also the history of his family, who had tried to do everything right—through to the present and the ongoing racism plaguing black men.

THE THOUGHTS THAT ONCE WE HAD
THOM ANDERSEN (US, 2015)

A “deeply personal, cheekily digressive dance through most of movie history.”
JEANNETTE CATSOULIS, NEW YORK TIMES

An opening text in the latest essay film by Thom Andersen (Red Hollywood, Los Angeles Plays Itself) introduces it as a “personal history of cinema, partially inspired by Gilles Deleuze.” But the film, composed of clips by directors from Griffith to Godard, doesn’t explicate the French philosopher’s dense texts. Rather, The Thoughts That Once We Had “is less a lecture than a wordless, associative, haunted journey—sometimes rueful and sobering, sometimes very funny—not just through the history of cinematic innovation, but through the 20th century itself” (Sukhdev Sandhu, The Guardian).

SALAAM CINEMA
MOHSEN MAHKMALBAF (IRAN, 1995)

No one knows better than Mohsen Makhmalbaf that Iranians are movie mad, so when he placed a casting call for one hundred actors for a new film, he expected a crowd; what he got was a crush—five thousand people. After genially announcing, “You are both the subject and the actors in the film,” he begins auditions. What unfolds is a parade of individuals who, for love of cinema, are by turns brash, crafty, shy, touchingly open, unwittingly hilarious. This is experimental filmmaking in every sense, yet we feel most is the director’s controlling hand—precisely the paradox Makhmalbaf is exploring. JUDY BLOCH

SACRED PLACES
JEAN-MARIE TÉNO (CAMEROON/FRANCE, 2009)

IN PERSON Christian Bruno, Natalija Vekic, and Emily Chao (Lieux saints). Burkina Faso’s capital city, Ouagadougou, is the location of the “official” showcase of African film, the FESPACO Film Festival. But here Jean-Marie Téno spotlights the far livelier heart of African cinema: the run-down “cine clubs” where a bootleg DVD, an old TV, and a few benches keep film alive not with money or polish, but through sheer love. Effortlessly switching among three men’s stories, Téno turns this tale of (a) cinema into a treatise on the arts in Africa—and the world—today, addressing how the moving image, music, and writing can affect society, and how they can flourish in even the bleakest settings. A WORLD REDRAWN: EISENSTEIN AND BRECHT IN HOLLYWOOD
IN PERSON Zoe Beloff

Preceding the screening, Beloff delivers a short presentation entitled “A World Redrawn.” Zoe Beloff has done extensive research into the Hollywood stints of two revolutionaries: Sergei Eisenstein, who visited for six months in 1930, and Bertolt Brecht, who fled Nazi Germany in 1941 and stayed for six years. Both had hopes for creating radical forms of popular cinema, but neither realized a Hollywood project, so Beloff decided to take their film scenarios into her own hands. Eisenstein’s Glass House and Brecht’s A Model Family in a Model Home reveal their shared interest in spectacle, voyeurism, and surveillance. In Beloff’s Two Marxists in Hollywood, the two artists, played by young boys, discuss their time in Tinseltown.

ERROL MORRIS (U.S., 1991)

IN CONVERSATION Errol Morris and Edward Frenkel Edward Frenkel is a professor of mathematics at UC Berkeley; his latest book is Love and Math. Stephen Hawking’s 1988 classic A Brief History of Time: From the Big Bang to Black Holes was written for the layperson, and Morris’s documentary uses cinema to go for the heart of this outsize mind. Hawking collaborates in this, guiding us (using his speaking device—he has ALS) through questions like “Why do we remember the past and not the future?” He is not unaware of their poetry, we think. FILMS

Guest curated by Tom Luddy, cofounder and codirector of the Telluride Film Festival, in conjunction with Cheryl Parsons, founder and executive director, Bay Area Book Festival.

Presented in collaboration with the Bay Area Book Festival

BAMPFA partners with the Bay Area Book Festival for the third year to present a series of films that celebrate, adapt, or creatively reinterpret the written word and its practitioners. Renowned writers, filmmakers, and other guests introduce the screenings.

I was program director and curator of film at the Pacific Film Archive from 1972 to 1980; in those days a young graduate student in philosophy—Errol Morris—was one of our most passionate cinephile “regulars.” Our theater was Errol’s film school, so I am very pleased that he will return to present his extraordinary A Brief History of Time, inspired by Steven Hawking’s book. Another highlight is Karel Zeman’s adaptation of the oft- filmed fantasy adventure classic by Rudolf Erich Raspe, The Fabulous Baron Münchausen. We will show a recently completed digital restoration, which makes clear that Zeman’s film is one of the most stunning, magical, and beautiful films ever made.

Critic Greil Marcus, who wrote a book on the film adaptation of The Manchurian Candidate in 2002, revisits this political thriller in light of current events. We pay tribute to the late author Denis Johnson with the film adaptation of his classic short story collection Jesus’ Son.

Two films bring us directly into literary lives. Mark Eisner, translator of Pablo Neruda and author of a major new biography, introduces Neruda and adds his own reminiscences. The series closes with a portrait of the legendary Armistead Maupin.

ZACHARIAS KUNUK, NATAR Ungalaaq (CANADA, 2016)

Maliglutit (Searchers) continues in the breathtaking vein of Canadian-Inuk filmmaker Zacharias Kunuk’s unforgettable Atanarjuat: The Fast Runner with a story of cruelty and cold revenge inspired by John Ford’s The Searchers (which was based on the novel by Alan Le May) and spoken entirely in Inuktitut. As Kuanana (Benjamin Kunuk) dogsleds across the snowy tundra to find his kidnapped wife and daughter, the brutal Arctic landscape and the film’s unsettling sound design escalate Maliglutit to a visceral, lyrical experience.

THE UNTOLD TALES OF ARMISTEAD MAUPIN

JENNIFER M. KROOT (US, 2017)

IN PERSON Jennifer M. Kroot

“He loves the world but he does find it hilariously funny”: this is actor Ian McKellen’s description of his friend Armistead Maupin. Starting in the 1970s, Maupin was the Charles Dickens of San Francisco; his serialized Tales of the City used outrageous fictions to open the eyes of San Francisco Chronicle readers to the real city around them. It was a city of seekers, like Maupin, who had “ventured beyond our biological family to find our logical one.” Tales became six novels and a TV series. In his new memoir, The Untold Tales of Armistead Maupin, and this film we meet the funny, thoughtful author whose goal is to create characters, “gay, straight, who function lovingly with one another.”

WAY BAY ON SCREEN

This selection of works from the exhibition Way Bay reveals the rich and varied landscape and people of the Bay Area. The films range from a time capsule of Market Street before the 1906 earthquake, through Bruce Baillie’s tribute to a Mendocino summer day, to Ernie Gehr’s mesmerizing panorama of the city’s skyline, to a river of naked bodies filmed at the San Francisco Art Institute. We also present a rare screening of Sara Kathryn Arledge’s glass slides, which she painted, scratched, and drew on before baking them into unique, vibrant abstractions not to be missed.

Inventing a cinematic equivalent to the novelist’s “involuntary memory,” Ruiz creates a permeable fiction in which every image opens on another and every level of the remembrance—from Marcel’s cozy childhood memories to his struggles to recall the past—exists on the same plane. The film is a casting miracle, as the actors are perfect physical and emotional matches for Proust’s characters.

Written by Gilles Taurand, Ruiz, based on the book by Marcel Proust. Photographed by Ricardo Aronovich. With Catherine Deneuve, Emmanuel Béart, Vincent Perez, John Malkovich. (158 mins, In French with English subtitles, Color, DCP, From KimStim)

NERUDA

PABLO LARRAIN (CHILE, 2016)

INTRODUCTION Mark Eisner

Mark Eisner is author of the biography Neruda: The Poet’s Calling, which presents the story of his cat-and-mouse escape from the authorities. “In this fiction,” someone says, “we all revolve around the protagonist.” Underneath the magical realism are brooding undertones of Chile’s future (and Neruda’s grim end) at the hands of Pinochet.

THE ANXIETY OF IDENTITY: THE FILMS OF

LUCRECIA MARTEL

Since her debut feature, La ciénaga (2001), won the Berlinale’s Alfred Bauer award for a work that “opens new perspectives on cinematic art,” Argentine director Lucrecia Martel has consistently lived up to that promise, emerging as one of the most compelling filmmakers of this century. Martel’s atmospheric films explore the moral, physical, psychological, and social decay of characters willfully blind to the historical violence and continuing social cost that pay for their privilege. In the Salta trilogy, set in Martel’s home province in Argentina’s tropical northwest, middle-class adults exist in an atmosphere of looming threat, self-absorbed and lurching toward self-destruction, while their servants reluctantly endure. Ever present, watchful children exist in their own dangerous universe, testing the limits of their powers. Her latest feature, Zama, travels back in time to depict the depravity of colonialism via the gradual breakdown of an officer of the Spanish crown stationed without respite at a remote outpost. Deftly staged down its blend of Lolita obsessions and repellant, adults and children, crowded into messy interiors, packed into cars, or moving through menacing landscapes. The intimacy evoked via the tightly framed mise-en-scène is enhanced by her sophisticated use of immersive soundtrack, distant thunder portending the ominous atmosphere is sustained through an overlapping sounds, and odd industrial noises. (“God sends us signs, that’s what matters,” notes Martel, “and deeply mysterious film about someone who strenuously conceals from herself the knowledge of her own guilt” (Peter Bradshaw, The Guardian).)

LA CIÉNAGA

LUCRECIA MARTEL (ARGENTINA, 2001)

IN PERSON  Natalia Brizuela

Natalia Brizuela is an associate professor of modern and contemporary Latin American literature and culture at UC Berkeley. (The Swamp). The first film in Martel’s award-winning Salta trilogy is an elliptical portrayal of social inertia, class, and race, revolving around a fetid swimming pool (the eponymous swamp) during summer vacation. An extended family orbits the polluted water and adjacent interiors. Napping, playing, and hunting, the children amuse themselves; the narcissistic adults, incapacitated by ennui and alcohol, tend to their own emotional and physical wounds. The servants tolerate the racist slurs, threats of dismissal, and inappropriate attentions of the household. Redolent of decay, the ominous atmosphere is sustained through an immersive soundtrack, distant thunder portending more than just rain.

Written by Martel. Photographed by Hugo Colace. With Graciela Borges, Mercedes Morán, Martín Adjemian, Daniel Valenzuela. (101 mins, In Spanish with English subtitles, Color, 35mm, From Janus Films)

SUNDAY / 4.22.18

ZAMA

IN PERSON  Lucrecia Martel

Adapted from the 1956 novel by Argentine writer Antonio di Benedetto. Zama is a Buñuelian glimpse into a colonial abyss via the mind and body of Don Diego de Zama. An officer of the Spanish crown stationed at a remote proto-Paraguayan outpost, Zama exists in perpetual anticipation of his transfer home. Martel describes Zama as “a man trapped in who he thinks he is,” and over the course of the film we observe his struggle to preserve his morality, identity, and sanity while waiting interminably for relocation.

THE HEADLESS WOMAN

LUCRECIA MARTEL (ARGENTINA, 2008)

IN PERSON  Lucrecia Martel

REPEATS THURSDAY / 5.10.18 (without Martel in person)

(La mujer sin cabeza). Sparing no suspense, Martel creates her own version of a “Hitchcock blonde,” a femme fatale who drives away without looking back after a car accident in which she hit, and probably killed, a dog, or maybe a boy. We witness both her distress and her deceit as, concussed but going about her life after the hit and run, she impassively allows her husband and lover to assure her innocence. One of the most critically acclaimed films of this century, The Headless Woman is “a masterly, disturbing and deeply mysterious film about someone who strenuously conceals from herself the knowledge of her own guilt” (Peter Bradshaw, The Guardian).

Written by Martel. Photographed by Bárbara Álvarez. With Maria Onetto, Claudia Cantero, Inés Efron, César Bordon. (87 mins, In Spanish with English subtitles, Color, 35mm, From UCLA Film & Television Archive, permission Strand Releasing)

SATURDAY / 5.5.18

THE HOLY GIRL

LUCRECIA MARTEL (ARGENTINA, 2004)

(The Holy Girl). “God sends us signs, that’s what matters,” notes a church choir teacher to her charges in Martel’s hallucinatory look at religious devotion and sexual awakening in small-town Argentina. The Holy Girl locks down its blend of Lolita obsessions and Catholic repressions with delirious visual and aural flair: the probing camera hovers barely inches away from the characters, seemingly guarding them from any potential sin, while the soundtrack echoes with a satanic litany of half-heard conversations, overlapping sounds, and odd industrial noises. “The Holy Girl is a film that defies categorization,” wrote A. O. Scott of the New York Times. “But I’m tempted to call it a miracle.”

INFRASTRUCTURE OF THE UNIVERSE

IN PERSON Zachary Epcar

Media are the infrastructure of the universe. Copper conducts electricity. The wind carries seeds. Petri dishes are media for bacterial culture. Anything that conducts the propagation of natural forces or living things can be a medium. This program explores how the interweaving of built, natural, and virtual media environments shapes our world. The rollicking Return to Forms and [ˈdʊŋkl̩ˌdɔ/uni026A̯ʧlant] cast a satirical eye on networked nature, while A Film, Reclaimed and Sky Hopinka's chronicle of Standing Rock, Dislocation Blues, reenvision resistance for the era of man-made natural disasters.

PATRICK HARRISON, GUEST CURATOR

Before or after the screening, between 3 and 5 p.m., experience a virtual reality demonstration at BAMPFA featuring Jakob Kudsk Steensen's Aquaphobia, which uses VR to connect inner psychological landscapes with exterior ecosystems. Admission free with ticket to the film program.

THE BURNING CHILD

JOSEPH LEO KOERNER, CHRISTIAN D. BRUUN (US, 2017)

PREVIEW SCREENING!

IN PERSON Joseph Leo Koerner

Joseph Leo Koerner is the Thomas Professor of History of Art and Architecture and a Senior Fellow at Harvard University. As UC Berkeley’s 2018 Avenali Chair in the Humanities, he will deliver the Avenali Lecture, “Art in a State of Siege: Bosch in Retrospect,” on March 15 at Morrison Library and lead a symposium on March 16 at the Townsend Center for the Humanities. Both events are free and open to the public. Information: townsendcenter.berkeley.edu.

The Burning Child is a film journey into Vienna’s interior. The Viennese interior is a built architecture from the city’s past. It is the city’s secret hidden beneath its foundations. And it is the space of the psyche mapped in Vienna. From around 1900, when it became Central Europe’s capital, to the present day, Vienna has inspired fateful dreams of home. Its famous denizens—Freud, Wittgenstein, Klimt—designed interiors that shaped the modern home. Through interviews, testimony, and archival footage, the film presents the Viennese interior against the backdrop of Austria’s troubled past.

SUNDAY / 3.11.18 / 4:30
SATURDAY / 3.31.18 / 3:00
Joseph Beuys (1921–1986) is remembered for his visionary contributions to postwar art as a painter, sculptor, performance artist, and social activist, recognizable by his trademark fedora. Associated with the Fluxus movement of the 1960s, his idiosyncratic work continues to exert a deep influence on today’s international avant-garde. This new documentary by Andres Veiel makes use of archival imagery that shows Beuys in his studio, as a teacher at the Kunstakademie Düsseldorf, and as a performer at happenings. It traces the impact of the war years on Beuys’s development as an artist, chronicling his art and his ideas about media, community, and capitalism in an intimate way. SUSAN OXTOBY

FILM TO TABLE DINNER FOLLOWS THE 3.10.18 SCREENING (P. 18)
Winner of the Best Director prize for Hou Hsiao-hsien at the 2015 Cannes film festival, The Assassin is a work of exceptional beauty. Ostensibly a wuxia set in the ninth-century Tang dynasty, it is poetic and enigmatic, a Hou film through and through, making use of long takes, stillness, and stunning landscapes lensed by the talented cinematographer Mark Lee Ping Bin (In the Mood for Love) and starring Shu Qi in a standout performance. "A mesmerizing slow burn of a martial-arts movie that boldly merges stasis and kinesis, turns momentum into abstraction, and achieves breathtaking heights of compositional elegance" (Justin Chang, Variety).

Each night, underneath a threadbare big top, Tairo puts an aging pride of big cats through their paces. Audiences may be dwindling, but the young lion tamer is happy. When a cherished lucky charm is stolen, Tairo sets off down the back roads of Italy to find the strongman who bequeathed it to him many years ago. The spirits of early Fellini and De Sica can be felt in this captivating docudrama, as the workaday world of the circus, gently refracted though the lens of the filmmakers, reveals a sense of wonder that may fade, but will never be extinguished. THE 5,000 FINGERS OF DR. T.
ROY ROWLANDS (US, 1953)
Recommended for ages 7 & up
One of Hollywood’s best fantasies, a musical with the mad humor of Dr. Seuss (a.k.a. Theodor Geisel), The 5,000 Fingers of Dr. T. is the story of a nine-year-old boy (Tommy Rettig) who is scolded for not practicing his music and daydreams himself into a fantastic world where the piano reigns supreme. Dr. Seuss based the story on memories of his own boyhood piano lessons from a tyrannical teacher (“It took me forty-three years to catch up with him!”). In the film, Hans Conried plays the terrible Dr. Terwilliker.
Written by Dr. Seuss (Theodor Geisel), Allan Scott; from a story by Dr. Seuss. Photographed by Frank Planer. With Tommy Rettig, Peter Lind Hayes, Hans Conried, Mary Healy. (88 mins, Color, DCP, From Sony Pictures Releasing)
